

Left: Revell has produced a range of 32 model spray colours in handy 100ml cans. As well as the four colours shown on the test paper, there is also a "Clear", a nominally matt varnish, which in fact dries to what I would call 'semi-matt' with a pleasant sheen that enhances any pigment beneath. The colours dry to an opaque, very matt finish, and could happily be used as undercoats. The surprise was the brown which, as you can see, dries to a very reddish, almost leathery colour, much lighter and more 'orangey' than the labels on the lid and box would imply. £5.99 each (though I have seen them for less online). Revell model kits are available from all good toy and model retailers. Above: the lovely Shogunate Japan Peasant Farmer's Cottage from 4Ground, one of their latest marvels in MDF that comes ready-painted so that all you have to do is put it together. I particularly like the sliding doors with rice paper 'glass' created from tracing paper. The kit can disassemble, permitting the placement of miniatures inside for samurai era skirmishes. This 28mm-compatible kit retails at £24. Lovely!

20mm white metal Spanish Civil War Republicans from Minairons, 15 per pack, for €15.95. See www.minairons.eu.

15mm plastic Late War British Infantry from PSC, 138 figures including PIATs, mortars and Bren guns for £21.50.

All figures and vehicles are shown actual size unless stated otherwise. Comments by the Editor.

They're here! The Mongols from Pendraken with infantry, light cavalry and Genghis himself. See www.pendraken.co.uk
